High Heating Powers care possessed by Victoria Carboll Salvo. The best remedy for Cuts, Burns, Sores and Wounds.

It is very important in this age of vast material progress that a remedy be pleasant to the taste and to the eye, easily taken, and suitable to the stomach and healthy in its nature and effects. Possessing these qualities, Syrup of Figs is the one perfect laxative and most gentle diuretic known.

RICI PLUM PADDING.

THIS delicious confection is nicely calculated to produce dyspepsia, heartburn, indigestion and headache. Borden's Bitter is equally well calculated to cure these troubles and has proved its powers in hundreds of cases. It is pleasant to the eye and in the taste, gentle, yet effective.

Employment Bureau.

The Dominion Government has established an Employment Bureau under the management of the Agent of Dominion Lands at each of the agency points mentioned below. The object of this bureau is to facilitate communication between those who are seeking work and those who may have need of their services. To find servants for the employer and work for the unemployed. In every case, the person interested in the Bureau is desired to give information on the following points: His name in full, age, religion, whether he is single or married, the name of his family, the number of his family, and whether he is willing to work in different places where employment may be had. Employers are desired to give information on the following points: The nature of the work, the name of the employer, the number of his family, and whether he is willing to work in different places where employment may be had. FARMERS INSTITUTE.

The tenth annual meeting of the Farmer's Institute was held in the City Hall, Saturday afternoon last.

Mr. Hy. Nichol occupied the chair. Ten minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

The annual report was then presented by the secretary-treasurer (Mr. E. A. Leach) and accepted as read on motion by S. A. Bedford.

The first order of business called by the chairman was the election of officers for the ensuing year.

Below are the results:— President: T. M. Percival; Vice-president: G. M. Roddick; Secretary-treasurer: Mr. T. E. Leach, (re-elected.) Directors: Messrs Van-tassel, Keeble, Henderson, J. A. Lowe, [Fred. Smith; Kennedy.

Auditors:—Mr. Hy. Smith and Mr. Nichol.

Two delegates (Mr. S. A. Bedford and Mr. Postlewaite) were also elected to attend the Central Farmers Institute.

Mr. Hy. Nichol, retiring from the chair made a neat little speech in which he spoke of the good work done in the past by the papers read from time to time all touching on subjects of great importance to farmers in general. Farmers in this country had lots to learn. In the matter of soil for instance, he knew a lot about that years ago and yet had lots to learn. He believed it would be some years before they (the farmers) could successfully farm in this country. He spoke in high terms of the service rendered by Mr. S. A. Bedford of the Experimental Farm to the Institute.

Mr. T. M. Percival, on taking his seat as chairman, thanked the Institute for the honor done him in electing him to the chair. He hoped that good feeling would continue to exist among the members, as in the past. He believed that the only way to successfully farm in this country was for the farmers to meet in a body and by comparing notes, materially aid each other in overcoming many difficulties. A vote of thanks to the retiring president was moved by Mr. Roddick; seconded by S. A. Bedford and carried unanimously.

The matter of holding a picnic was then discussed. It was decided to hold the picnic on the 29th of June, and that the Patrons of Industry be asked to amalgamate.

A resolution was then moved by W. Middleton and seconded by John E. Smith.

"That all railway companies operating in Manitoba, be respectfully asked to reduce the freight on wheat, five cents per bushel below the present rate, for the year 1893, and ten cents to Montreal, as the exorbitant rates charged at present, leave no margin to the producer at the present low prices of grain."

Mr. John E. Smith said he thought the present rates charged by the C. P. R. were at present, exorbitant. It made it impossible for the farmer to make any money out of wheat, with such rates.

Mr. H. Nichol thought, that considering the grants made by the Dominion Government, of land, etc., to the C. P. R., they could well afford to give the farmers a much lower rate than they asked for.

It was moved by Mr. Doran and seconded by Mr. R. Smyth.

"That the secretary be authorized to ask the Finance Minister to meet the farmers of Manitoba, during the meeting of the Central Institute at Brandon, to be held on the 29th inst., and that the following names be a committee to meet and submit to the minister, the farmers wishes, with reference to a tariff reform. Committee: Messrs. S. C. Doran, Postlewaite, Wm. Middleton, W. S. Speers, J. Leach, Hy. Nichol, G. M. Roddick, J. McKellar, Geo. Roddick, J. E. Smith, Robt. Smyth and C. Kester."

The question then came up of establishing a cheese factory in the Brandon District.

Mr. A. E. Eddie, late of Ottawa City was present at the meeting. This gentleman was connected with the cheese making industry in the east, and claims to have a full knowledge of cheese-making. He would start a cheese factory if the Institute would guarantee him 400 cows within a radius of eight miles, and would have a factory erected by next fall. There is little doubt but that the factory will be erected as the number of cows asked for can be guaranteed to Mr. Eddie.

CITY COUNCIL.

Regular meeting, held in the City Hall, present: The Mayor, A. D. Caldwell, Patterson, Merritt, Cameron, Keady and Hester.

The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted.

A communication was read from Thos. Deaubier asking the city to put down a suitable sidewalk in front of the new Reubier House.

Patterson—Cameron—That Thos. Deaubier's petition be granted. Carried.

Accounts were then read from Municipal Farming Co. and referred to Board of Works.

A communication from Jan. Dixon, Hon. Sec. of the General Hospital asking for grant of $125.00 for 400 multiple trees planted in various parts of the city by stray cattle was filed for the present.

An account from the same gentleman was also presented for $125.00 for 400 multiple trees supplied to the city, and on motion of Ald. Cameron and Patterson was ordered to be paid.

A communication was read from H. G. Dixon referring to the number of house-builders who desire making connections with water pipes and recommending that authority be given to the proper authority to procure plant for fifty houses referred to Water Works and Sewers.

A petition was presented asking that a 2 plank sidewalk be laid between Rosser and Pacific Ave. referred to Board of Works.

A numerous signed petition was then presented to the council recommending the purchase of the land on the flats for the purpose of converting the same into a park, referred to the park committee.

Reesor—Merritt—That Jno. McNulty be given one month's notice to vacate his position as street foreman. This created a lot of discussion and after Ald. Caldwell and Cameron had spoken strongly in favor of McNulty as a public servant, the motion was lost.

Below are some of the principal items recommended to be paid by the committees: E. M. Cathro Water Works and Sewerage, as per estimate of engineer in charge $1448.00; J. H. McKnight, estimate, $1517.40. Carried.

FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT.

Recommend that the estimates for the current year be accepted $5900.00. Carried.

LICENSE, POLICE, HEALTH AND RELIEF.

That W. Duncan be paid $8.00 for scavenging.

That J. S. Loughton be paid $90.00 for Police uniform.

Wilson and Smyth be paid $15.00 for burial of F. Forbes. Carried.

BOARD OF WORKS.

That the following be paid: Pay sheet ending 17 June, 1893, $391.55.

Pay sheet charged Cathro, filling in drains, $15.75.

Recommended that estimates for Board of Works for 1893 shall not exceed $75,000. Carried.

The special committee appointed to inquire into the circumstances attending the death of C. E. Miller's horse, which happened last fall in the sewers, met on June 19th and reports as follows:—

"Recommended that C. E. Miller's case be referred back for city solicitor's opinion, as Mr. J. H. McKnight claims that he is not liable to the city through lapse of time as per clause No. 518 of the Municipal Act." Report adopted.

PROVINCIAL AND TERRITORIAL.

Winnipeg is getting up a big list of subscribers to the Princess May's wedding gift fund.

The town of Carberry has purchased from the C. P. R. twenty five acres of land west of the town and will convert the same into a race track.

What is reported to be eighteen inches high in the Melita district.

Work on the Dominion Industrial School will soon be in full swing. Mr. Harrington is the contractor.

A few cases of measles are reported in town.

A convention of the Y. M. C. A. will be held at Boissevain the 29th and 31st inst.

Women's Christian Temperance Societies have been organized in Morris, Souris and Glenboro.

Experimental Farm.

Mr. S. A. Bedford of the Experimental Farm returned from Rat Portage on Saturday last, whither he went in search of some hardy specimens of northern grown trees. Mr. Bedford was fortunate enough to secure 2,000 of them, all hardy specimens and he thinks they will do well transplanted on the farm, and will enhance the beauty of this already beautiful place. Among the different species are: Black and White spruce, Canada balsam, Red, White and Black Pine, Tamarac, Native mountain ash, Sumach, Labrador, Wild arum and Black alder. Mr. Bedford says the prospects this year for a good crop have never been better. The different kinds of wheat growing at the farm have already attained considerable size and everything looks delightful.

Diseases of the Chest and Lungs.

These diseases are too well known to require any description. How many thousands are carried every year to the silent grave by that dreadful scourge, consumption, which always commences with a slight cough. Keep the blood pure and healthy by taking a few doses of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills each week, and disease of any kind is impossible. All modern dealers sell Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

The entertainment to be given on July 4th, under the auspices of the R. T. of T. will no doubt prove to be the event of the season. Miss E. Stevenson, Jim Fox and M. Fred Abbott will all be known in the city, will render a program consisting of vocal music, dramatic recitals, reading, etc. The R. T. of T. are to be congratulated in securing this talent.

On Tuesday evening last about forty of the members of the R. T. of T. drove out to the farm to visit the new farm buildings which were recently opened at that place. A most enjoyable time was spent, there being a race along to Brandon at about 12.30.

The S. O. E. Juvenile and adult lodges held meeting on Tuesday evening last. At the Juvenile meeting it was decided to give the boys a picnic on the farm near Kenney. The adult lodge invited three candidates into the mysterious of the order.

Look out for the great real estate auction sale at W. H. Hooper's office on June 28, 29, and 30; commencing each evening at 7 o'clock. W. H. Hooper auctioneer.

Mr. Simon Lloyd, of 24-9-21, says the crops this year appear better than he has ever seen them in Manitoba. The wheat is already over a foot high, and all the other cereals are doing well.

Mr. James Glass is starting a foundry in connection with Lillaw & Green & Green and Co's machine shop on 10th St. Brandon, and will be ready in about a week to take orders for all kinds of casting. &c.

It was principally through the efforts of Mr. Cottingham, that Mr. Arrowsmith has such large audiences at all of his discourses in this city. The gentleman was introduced to Mr. Cottingham by an old acquaintance, the Hon. S. H. Blake, of Toronto.

Mr. W. H. Mallett, of Souris, has been in town a few days attending to business. In addition to his seeing after the affairs of his watchmaking establishments in Brandon, Souris and elsewhere, he has lately gone extensively into butchering and cattle dealing. He is a hustler.

The Farmers Elevator Co. of this vicinity met in the City Hall last week and appointed the following as directors: Messrs. Postlewaite, Lawley, Wm. Middleton, D. M. McKellar, R. E. Leach and C. S. Doran. The intention is to organize with a capital of $25,000 and purchase Smart & Darrach's elevator.

The sports to be held on the 1st of July under the auspices of the Clan Gordon Society promise to be a grand affair. Mr. Morrison the representative has spared no pains and a course in the drawing up of a good programme. The city band, under the able leadership of Prof. Wiegand, will perform for the first time on this occasion.

The "Warning" sent by George Matuska through last week's paper to Jack Story was altogether unnecessary. Mr. T. says that Matuska was unlawfully beating a boy, Daniel Craig, then he interfered and was himself repulsed by two Bohemians, whom he fought with before he could reach the poor lad's room.

To the Uxbridge Piano Company, Gentlemen,—The piano you shipped to me last February still remains in perfect tune, although it has not been tuned since it arrived. It gives us entire satisfaction, the power and sweetness of tone is acknowledged by all who have heard it; the action and tone suits my wife to perfection.

Yours truly, E. J. Cox.

Caldow, N. W. T.

The Brandon Brass Band met together for practice in the city hall, Monday last, but didn't practice much, as the council was in session up stairs and couldn't stand the noise, so work was sent by the acting mayor to Prof. Wiegand asking him to postpone his practice to some other evening. This was a great disappointment to all the members of the band. They want to be in good working order for the 1st of July.

There is no roof that is wearing so well and giving the same amount of satisfaction as felt pitch, and when grained it will last for twenty years and is almost exclusively used in the cities of Toronto and Montreal, it costs less than any other roof and wears longer. For full particulars write or call on Messrs. Hanbury & McNea, they carry it in stock and are prepared to put it on in short notice.

There is one firm in the city that business seems to be prospering and that is Messrs. Hanbury & McNea, this week they are unloading three cars of lumber and two cars of lime, and each week since the spring opened up they have unloaded a lot of cars, and as it is not being piled up in their yard, it must be going into building somewhere which goes to show that there is considerable building going on in the city and country and that those building know where to get dry lumber.

Mr. Robt. Scott, of the Rosspack garden which contains 35 acres and is partly with in the city limits, is a special and indispensable industry so far as the health and sustenance of the city are concerned. During the past six weeks Mr. Scott has been regularly giving his rounds and our inhabitants know how much they have delighted in his strawberries, nice and fresh, will soon be ready for picking and small fruits of all kinds will soon be plentiful. Cauliflower, cabbage, potatoes, etc., on account of the late rains will be a superfluous crop. He keeps a number of hands employed and inquires an adjunct to our city.

A picnic will be held on the 23rd of June at the experimental farm by the Brandon Farmers' Lodge and the Patrons of Industry who combine and take advantage of the meetings of the Central Farmers' Institute which will be held in Brandon from the 27 to the 29th of June to gather the best farmers of the Province who will be attending the meeting as delegates from the different Institutes. Addresses will be given by Prof. Robertson and C. E. James, M. A. Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, and others. We would like to see the city hall filled to its utmost capacity during the meetings of the Central Institute, when such is the case it is a sure indication of future prosperity for the Province. It is hard to understand the narrow mindedness which prevents farmers supporting their own institutions and unfortunately on their part they have been poorly attended.

WOMAN'S WORLD IN PARAGRAPHS.

A Kind of Man That Young Ladies Should Not Worry About.

"Do young men think less of girls who work or more of those who do not?" A leading New York newspaper has offered a prize for the best answers to this question from a man and a woman. The idea was started by a young woman who wrote to the paper saying she knew several working girls who would not let their male friends know what they were doing. My dear girl, don't spend five minutes harrowing yourself up over a question of this kind. Any young man from whom you must disguise the fact that you are honest, brave and industrious enough to earn your own living is just the sort of man that you don't want to be on speaking terms with. I think I'd climb a fence to get away from that kind of a man. There's something radically wrong with his heart or his head or both.

Woman suffrage bills are cropping out all over the country. The Ontario legislature has just defeated one by a vote of 37 to 16. There's nothing like keeping at it.

An unusual gist of "Arabian Nights" tales of women who are making fabulous wealth in literature are just now going the rounds. Not one in a hundred are true. But that wouldn't matter so much if they did not do a vast deal of harm by firing the ambition of those who could earn better livings at something else. If the love of writing, like virtue, is its own reward, go ahead, but let no woman, except she possesses great and exceptional talent, expect to get rich at it.

Sir Edwin Arnold is credited with having said that if he were at liberty to choose his sex and country he would be an American woman. He must be the first man who ever wished he was a woman. If he isn't, it would be interesting to know who the other one is. But certainly he is right about the proud position of the American as compared with other women. Right here it would be well for all women to remember that said proud position was not gained by sitting down and letting men arrange it for them. Every new advantage that she enjoys today was obtained through the grit and courage of some other woman. The men, bless their hearts, don't mean to be hard hearted and tyrannical, but how are they to know what a woman wants unless she tells her needs known? "If you don't see what you want, ask for it."

The blackballing of Lotta in New York's most famous woman's club, Sorosis, has caused a large sensation in literary and artistic circles. What a pity it is that club members cannot remember their initiation vows and keep silent upon these matters. But women are no worse than men, as witness the case of Mr. Seligman's rejection from the Union League club. Miss Lotta Crabtree, who is a bright, sensible, talented woman, against whose character there has never been a breath of reproach, and who is withal a very wealthy woman, has come out of the ordeal with flying colors and added dignity. Her calm acceptance of the situation, with the remark that she felt complimented that 210 of such brilliant, brainy women should have voted for her while only 7 voted against her, puts her in a much more dignified light than the narrow minority who dropped in the blackballs. The affair has done much more harm to Sorosis than it has to Miss Lotta.

General Booth says "women are the best rulers" and has named his daughter instead of either of his sons as his successor in command of the Salvation Army.

Mr. Arthur Balfour has frequently said that his most valuable political advice comes from his sister and her keeper, Miss Agnes Balfour. Mr. Balfour is a gentleman to admit it.

The newest thing in a detective agency for the shadowing of prospective bridegrooms. Just picture the feelings of George if he should discover that his fiancée, which he imagines is being worn next to Gladys' hair, or at least in a silver frame on her dressing table, is instead walking around in a detective's pocket. This is actually wringing the last drop of sentiment out of the wooing. Still women, especially those without male relatives, can know very little of the life of a man outside of their own drawing rooms. They are continually being deceived, and why should they not put themselves in possession of the facts as a necessary precaution?

A well known physician has said that catarrh is a very rare disease among Quakers, and he attributes this to the fact that the Quaker bonnet protects the back of the head and neck from the cold. If this is true, the idea deserves careful consideration. Why could not some pretty headgear be invented that would protect this sensitive portion of the anatomy? But if it didn't bristle and perk itself up in the aggressively coquettish way necessary to keep pace with the sleeves and exaggerated frills of the present craze, it would be dropped immediately. Almost any woman would rather have the catarrh than an unfashionable bonnet. ALICE E. IVES.

Jellied Veal.

A knuckle of veal, 2 onions, a blade of mace, a bay leaf, a gill of good vinegar, 12 whole cloves, 6 peppercorns, a half teaspoonful of ground allspice, salt and pepper to taste. Wipe the knuckle and cut it into pieces. Put it into a kettle with 2 quarts of cold water. Bring it slowly to simmering point. Skim and simmer gently for two hours, then add the onion, mace, bay leaf, cloves, peppercorns and allspice and simmer one hour longer. Take out the knuckle, carefully remove the bones and put the meat into a square mold. Boil the liquor until reduced to one quart. Strain, add the vinegar, salt and pepper to taste, pour over the meat and stand it away over night to cool. When cold, turn it carefully out of the mold, garnish it with parsley and lemon, and it is ready to serve.

HER POINT OF VIEW.

The Home Men Want and Which Their Wives Should Give Them.

E. C. Gardiner said once in print: "Unless you can make your house something more than a workshop or a show-case it will always be a good deal less than a home." A man's home is usually not his workshop. It is his wife's; it is also her show-case. There is a great temptation here—and many women succumb—to forget that the roof over one's head contains more than these two things—that it is first of all and above all a home. Still more than that, although the house-keeper takes good care of it, performs her daily toil within it and adorns it to the best of her taste and ability, it does not belong exclusively to her.

It is quite true that in all essentials most men are really nothing more than guests among their families. They use the house to eat and sleep in and to spend their evenings and holidays in, if the place be agreeable to them. This is no more than a sort of visiting. They have no chance to live in the house; they are working hard to keep up. This thought should be a pitying one and serve with those upon whom their entertainment rests to make their time, short at the best, as pleasant as for any other comer. But it never should—as it sometimes does—cloud the fact that it is his home, and that he has equal rights therein.

When that tired man comes home at night, he certainly deserves to find awaiting him at least one orderly, quiet room, where he can read his paper in comfort and smoke the pipe of peace. If he is so fortunate as to have a room of his own, an evening in a stiff, elegantly furnished parlor, where they dare not smoke on account of the curtains and where they had not so much as an easy chair in which to recline, or in a cluttered, cramped "apartment" riotous with babies and superintended by a disheveled, peevish wife. And in neither case, with all sympathy and understanding for the latter, have I seen any valid excuse for this. It was because "he" was good natured and would stand it. The reward of virtue was that he was obliged to stand it.

In his wooing days such a reception would have been impossible. There are a good many reasons—but not one of them is ordinarily acceptable—why it is possible now.

A man deserves, I repeat, one comfortable corner. He has earned the right to smoke in it and put up his feet and wear slippers and bury himself in his paper. This may not be particularly jolly for the lady who sits, with her sewing, on the opposite side of the table. She may retort to me that he would not have acted thus in his wooing days. Oh, but let her be patient when she remembers that this is all the part that he can claim in "all the comforts of home."

Another thing: Perhaps the same good lady on the other side of the table is busy with her crocheting, where one has to count and is prone to lose the thread of the conversation, or she may feel so overweighed with her domestic cares, poor soul, that she doesn't find time to keep up with the news of the day. I haven't much patience with that, but I don't wonder under such circumstances if the good man is uncommunicative. I do not speak at random in asserting that the luckiest person rarely fails to "make time" for what he ardently desires.

Two sisters-in-law I know lament, half laughingly, that their husbands go rather than to them to "mother and the girls" with every item of interest. There is food for reflection in the fact. Mother and the girls are as enthusiastic politicians, for example, as themselves. Their wives are not. I never saw the man yet who wouldn't talk a woman into doing anything pleasant to say in return. There is also food for reflection in the query, how many women care anything, except superficially and ignorantly, about politics? Yet it is the one absorbing subject with many men. How many understand, or wish to, their husbands' business? Then what should they have in common? Think of these things.

English Apron.

The apron shown in the cut may be made of almost any pretty fabric material, whether it be silk or wash goods. The one illustrated is of the barred lawn, trimmed with heavy lace and insertion. The bib is full, fitted to the figure by two rows of shirring above the waist line. The straps, going up at the sides, meet in a point, to be fastened behind between the shoulders. The front of the body of the apron is plain, with two darts. It has a ruffle of the goods at the bottom, with two rows of shirring, above which is a wide band of insertion. The pocket is gathered with one row of shirring, headed by two. The triangular wing pieces at the sides are cut with the longest edge towards the straight way of the goods. These are included completely around the apron, including the ruffle at the bottom. The wing pieces are tied behind by two rows of wide shirring, edged with lace. They may be substituted if desired.

The Highest Inhabited Town.

The highest place in the world regularly inhabited is the Buddhist town of Thule, which is 16,000 feet above sea level. The highest inhabited place in the Americas is at Galera, 15,635 feet above sea level.

He struggled with some of the water, and at last, with much almost capsize the boat. Matt looked now, and saw a small flat, wooden trunk, with a few pieces of shiny wood. There were several pieces of wood which seemed to have been part of a boat. These, too, he took and threw down on the small, bare, rocky shore.

"That's what it is," cried the man, "a boat, surely, said Jones, and a boat, and look ye now, I have a boat inside, or may, or may not have sunk. However, now, let's see what we can do."

"Yes, William, I was a-dreaming. Oh, it was such a heavenly dream! I was a standing on the shore, William, and it was a-blowing hard from the east, and all at once I see a ship as big as an Indian, come in with a load of goods, and a load of round, William, dear, and there was no one but you and me; and when she broke up I see gold and silver and jewels washing ashore just like floating weeds, and the drowned, every one of them, and when I tried to pull it off, it wouldn't come; and just as I pulled out my little knife to cut the finger off, and put it in my pocket, you shook me, William, and woke me up. Oh, it was a heavenly dream!"

William Jones had listened with ill-disguised interest to the early part of this speech, but, on its conclusion, he gave another grunt of undissembled disgust.

"Well, you're awake now, old 'un; so jump up. I've brought sunnime home. Look sharp, and get a light."

Thereupon the old man, who was fully dressed, in a pair of old woollen trousers and a guernsey, slipped from the bed and began fumbling about the room.

He soon found what he wanted—a box of matches and a rude, home-made candle, fashioned of a long, coarse reed dipped in sheep's tallow; but owing to the fact that he was exceedingly feeble and tremulous, he had some difficulty in lighting it, and his gentle son grow impatient.

"Here, give 'un to me!" said William. "You're wasting them matches just as if they cost you a dollar. A precious fair you are, and no mistake!"

The candle being lighted and burning with a feeble flame, he informed the old man of what he had found. In a moment the latter was down on his knees, opening the box and greedily examining its contents. But William pushed him impatiently away, and closed the lid with a bang.

"There, enough o' that, old 'un! You hold the light while I carry the box in and put it away."

All right, William dear—all right," returned the old man, obeying gleefully. "I know'd we should have luck, by that beautiful dream."

The two men—each holding the light and the other carrying the trunk—passed through a door at the back of the kitchen and entered an inner chamber. This chamber, too, contained a window, which was so blocked up, however, by lumber of all kinds that little or no daylight entered. Filled in great confusion were old sacks, some partly full, some empty, coils of rope, broken rods, broken fragments of ships' planks, rotten and barnacled, a small boat's rudder, dirty sails, several fish coats, bits of iron ballast, and other rubbish and jetsam, so that the chamber had a salt and fish-like smell, suggesting the hold of some vessel.

In one corner of the room was a small wooden bed, with a mattress and coarse bedclothes, and in the wall close to it was certain feminine attire which the owner of the Caravan would have recognized as the garb worn by Matt on the morning of her first appearance.

Placing the box down, William Jones carefully covered it with a portion of an old sail.

"It's sunnime, but it ain't much," he muttered, discontentedly. "Lucky them coast guards didn't see me come ashore. If they did, though, it wouldn't signify; for what's floating on the sea belongs to him as finds it."

A sound started him as he spoke, and, looking round suspiciously, he saw Matt entering the room and stood at the doorway. But she was not alone; standing behind her in the shadow was a man—none other, indeed, than Monk, of Monkshurst.

While Matt entered the room to throw down her load, William Jones stood in the doorway. His quick eye had noted the movements of father and son.

"More plunder, William Jones?" he asked, grimly.

In a moment William Jones was transformed. The open expression of his face changed to one of mingled stupidity and sadness; he began to whine.

"More plunder, Mr. Monk?" he said. "No, no; the days for finding that is gone. Matt and me has been on the shore foragin' for a bit o' firewood."

"Put it down, Matt; put it down," said Matt, "it's a good thing, it is." Matt did as she was told; opening her arms, she threw her load into a corner of the room; then William Jones hurried the whole party back into the kitchen.

The men started themselves on benches; but Matt moved about the room to get a light. The light, as well as everything else, was a living, throbbing, pulsing, breathing thing, of William Jones.

It consisted, not of a candle, but of a long rush, which had been gathered from the marshes by Matt and afterwards dried and dipped in grease by William Jones. Matt lighted it and fixed it in a little wooden stick which was evidently made for the purpose and which was attached to a table near the hearth.

When the work was finished, she threw off her hat and jacket, retired to the further end of the hearth and sat down on the floor.

During the whole of this time Mr. Monk had been watching her gloomily; and he had been watching in his turn by William Jones. At last the latter spoke.

"Matt's growed," said he; "she's growed wonderful. Lord bless us! she's a bit changed she is sin' that night when you found her down on the shore. Why, her own friends wouldn't know her."

Mr. Monk started and frowned.

"Her friends?" he said—"what friends?"

"Why, them as owns her," continued William Jones. "If they wasn't all drowned in the ship what she came ashore from, she'd be a rich woman. Mayhap some day they'll find her, and reward me for bringin' her up a good gal—that's what I allus tell her."

"So that's what you always tell her, do you?" returned Monk grimly. "Then you're a fool for your pains. The girls got no friends—haven't I told you that before?"

"Certainly you have, Mr. Monk," returned William Jones, meekly; "but look ye now, I think—"

"You're no right to think," thundered Monk; "you're not paid for thinkin'; you're paid for keepin' the girl, and what more do you want? Matt," he continued, in a softer tone, "come to me."

But Matt didn't hear—or at any rate, did not heed; for she made no movement. Then Monk, gazing intently at her, gave vent to the same remark as

William Jones had done a few hours before.

"Where have you been to-day," he said, "to have on that frock?"

Again Matt hung her head and was silent. Monk repeated the question; and, seeing that she was determined to have no answer, she threw up her head defiantly and said, with a tone of pride in her voice:

"I put it on to be to look!"

"To be to look?" repeated Monk. "Yes," returned Matt; "to have my likeness took. There be a painter chap here that lives in a cart; he's took it."

It was curious to note the changes in Mr. Monk's face. At first he tried to appear amiable; then his face gradually darkened into a look of angry suspicion. Matt never once withdrew her eyes from him—his very presence seemed to rouse all that was bad in her, and she glared at him through her tangled locks in much the same manner as a shaggy terrier puppy might gaze at a bull which it would fain attack, but feared on account of its superior strength.

"Matt," said Mr. Monk again, "come here."

This time she obeyed; she rose slowly from her seat and went reluctantly to his side.

"Matt, look me in the face," he said. "Do you know who this painter is?" Matt shook her head.

"How many times have you seen him?"

"Twice."

"And what has he said to you?"

"A lot o' things."

"Tell me one thing."

"That he said my mother was, and I told him I hadn't got none."

Mr. Monk's face once more grew black as night.

"So," he said, "poking and prying and asking questions. I thought, as much, he's a devil, a devil!"

"No, he ain't," said Matt, bluntly.

"Matt, my girl," said Mr. Monk, taking no notice of her interruption, "I want you to promise me something."

"What is it?"

"Not to go near that painter again!"

Matt shook her head.

"Shan't promise," she said, "cause I shall go. My likeness ain't took yet; he takes a time, he does. I'm going to put them things on to-morrow and be look again."

For a moment the light in his eyes looked dangerous, then he smiled and patted her cheek—at which career she shrunk away.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"Nothing," said Matt. "I don't like to be pulled about, that's all."

"You mean you don't like me?"

"Don't know. That's tellin'."

"And yet you've no cause to hate me, Matt, for I've been a good friend to you—and always shall, because I like you, Matt. Do you understand, I like you?"

So anxious did he seem to impress this upon her that he put his arm around her waist, drew her towards him, and kissed her on the cheek, a ceremony he had never performed before. But Matt seemed by no means to appreciate the honor; as his lips touched her cheeks she shivered, and when he released her she began to cough, a cough which he wip'd the touch away.

If Mr. Monk noticed this action on the part of the girl, he deemed it prudent to take no notice of it. He said a few more pleasant things to Matt, and again patted her on the cheek, a ceremony he had never performed before. But Matt seemed by no means to appreciate the honor; as his lips touched her cheeks she shivered, and when he released her she began to cough, a cough which he wip'd the touch away.

Placing the box down, William Jones carefully covered it with a portion of an old sail.

"It's sunnime, but it ain't much," he muttered, discontentedly. "Lucky them coast guards didn't see me come ashore. If they did, though, it wouldn't signify; for what's floating on the sea belongs to him as finds it."

While Matt entered the room to throw down her load, William Jones stood in the doorway. His quick eye had noted the movements of father and son.

"More plunder, William Jones?" he asked, grimly.

"Perhaps, now, you have come, you'll be good enough to stop round that I may continue my work. I am loping to refresh my memory with a sight of your face, Matt!"

"Well, you can't," said Matt; "they're locked up."

"Eh—what's locked up—my memory or your face?"

It was clear Matt could not appreciate banter. She saw him smile and guessed that he was laughing at her, and her face grew black and malignant. She would have slunk off, but his voice stopped her.

"Come here, Matt," he said. "Don't be silly, child; tell me what's the matter, and—why, what has become of your repentant raiment—your gorgeous Sunday clothes?"

"Didn't I tell you—they're locked up."

"Indeed?"

"Yes, William Jones done it 'cause he told him. He don't want me to come here and be to look."

"Oh! Tell you what it is, Matt, we will have our own way in spite of them. For the present this picture shall be put aside. If a day or so you can again don your Sunday raiment, and sit to me again in them—if not, I dare say I shall be able to finish the dress from memory. That portrait I shall give to you. In the meantime, as I want one for myself, I will paint you as you are. Do you approve?"

Matt nodded her head vigorously.

"Very well," said Brinkley. "Then we will get on."

He removed from his easel and carefully covered the portrait upon which he had been working. Then he put up a fresh cardboard, and sat down, inviting Matt to do the same.

With the disappearance of the Sunday clothes the girl's stiffness seemed to have disappeared also, and she became again a veritable child of nature. She looked like a shaggy young pony fresh from a race on the mountain side, as she threw herself on the ground in an attitude which was all picturesqueness and beauty. Then, with her plump, sun-burnt hand, she began to caressly plump up the grass, while her black eyes searched alternately the prospect and the painter's face.

"He says you're a prying scoundrel," she said.

Brinkley looked up and smiled.

"Who is he, Matt?"

"Mr. Monk," she replied, and gave a jerk with her head in the direction of Monkshurst.

"Oh, indeed," said Brinkley. "It is my humble equestrian friend, is it? I'm sure you must be obliged to him. And when, may I ask, did he bore you with his opinion of me?"

"Last night, when he come to see William Jones. He said I wasn't to be took no more, 'cause you was a scoundrel poking and prying."

Brinkley began to whistle, and went on for a while vigorously touching up his work. Then he looked up and regarded the girl curiously.

"Mr. Monk seems to be very much interested in you, Matt."

The girl nodded her head vigorously; then, remembering the odious career to which Mr. Monk had subjected her, she began to rub her cheek again.

"Why is Mr. Monk so interested in you? Do you know?"

"Praps it's 'cause he found me when I come ashore."

"It took twenty minutes for the ferry this morning," said Mrs. Higgins. "Collections are always slow in this neighborhood," returned Higgins.

"Amy—So you won't give me back my hoopie skirt; well, that's stealing, and you won't go to heaven. Frodile (whose mamma told him he was born in heaven)—don't care; I came from there, and I like it here better."

"What is the difference between humour and nonsense?" said the inquisitive man. "Humour," replied the genial man, "is represented by the joke you make yourself; nonsense is represented by the joke some other fellow makes."

THURSDAY, JUNE 22, 1893.

The present manipulator of the Brandon Sun appears to have gone into his hole over the park question. Put a cold shell to the nose of a snail and he will invariably draw himself back into his shell, no matter how ambitious he is before it. What the public would like to know is, is it not a fact the gentleman hawking around that petition was promised a commission in case he sold the swamp to the council for a park, is only this and nothing more.

Premier Greenway in the light of recent events ought to hold up his head proudly over the railway competition he has secured for this country at a cost of $535,000 to the people. The other day the Great Northern, "Jim" Hill's road got its connection with the coast completed and down went the passenger rates from St. Paul to the coast from $60 and $35 respectively for first and second class tickets, to $35 and $25. The rate to Spokane was cut to $20, and for all points in Manitoba and elsewhere, where the road has connections, similar reductions are the order. The promoters of Greenway's road, the N. P. R. say "they will try and meet 'Jim' Hill." That is the competitor Greenway has got for such a slice of government cash, one that will try and meet reductions made by others. Our readers will remember this is the same R. R. Co. that proposed to build branches to Winnipeg, Brandon, Virden, etc., in Manitoba, when the N. P. R. contract was before the House, and that Greenway, Sifton, Smart & Co. pronounced bogus simply because there was no $500 a mile clause in their offer. By-and-by the people will see how they have been duped by Greenway and his pet schemers. We may add that J. C. Todd, Esq., is the agent of this competing road in this city.

THAT PARK.

The Park question is now before a committee of the council. To our mind the proper thing for the committee to do is ascertain the probable purchase prices of the several eligible sites in the city with the costs of putting them in proper order, the swamp site included. Then call a public meeting and lay all the information before it. As a by-law will have to be submitted before any purchase can be made, it is well the people should know all the facts before the costs of a by-law are incurred and that the people may vote intelligently if it is submitted to them.

Every one knows how petitions are circulated and signed. There would be no trouble in getting one largely signed to hang Queen Victoria if there was any one to circulate it. In many instances people sign a petition as a favor to the parties circulating it; others because the petitioner thinks the thing petitioned for is of the cost and the circumstances are desired, and others agree for a dozen or more motives. In this case an irresponsible man who does not care whether the taxes of Brandon are 5 mills or 10 on the dollar, because he has none of them to pay, circulates a petition because he is well paid for doing it, and perhaps by the use of oil and water hawks many on his combs and gets their names, but surely an intelligent council cannot act on that.

To be useful a park should be used for all purposes of amusement, and not as a battlefield for mosquitoes only. The Taxpayers say they will not utilize this proposed site. It cannot be fitted up for spring amusements of any kind except at a heavy cost. The trees spoken of in that locality are nearly all on the road allowance, so that the alleged advantages of that locality in the price of the land to the owners and the amount of the commission to be paid to the petition hawker only.

HERESFORD.

Crops around the vicinity never looked as prosperous as they do this season. Miss L. Lowrie is visiting her sister teachers for the Gardener school. Mr. Jas. Moore gave the ladies who kindly cleaned out the church a sumptuous supper. They all seemed very pleased to see Miss Cox's presence there. We're very sorry to hear Mr. Lloyd had the misfortune to lose one of his best horses on the 3rd inst., notwithstanding that Mr. Nichols sent him word his mare had got badly cut in the wire fence. Mr. Ingram is going west in a few days for his summer vacation. What makes Charles smile those days? It must be the new arrival. A very pleasant evening was spent at Mr. Lloyd's last Friday. Mr. Koutzes, Mr. Stockton's enterprising young foreman, thinks breaking and back-setting go well together. There is some talk of Alf. giving a picnic soon, he is the stuff.

AIDS.

The Brandon Summer Fair is Booming—indications point to the most successful show of any yet held. The Secretary Thos. Harkness says the Prize Lists will be ready in a few days.

Strayed.

From the premises of the undersigned 1 Grey dog, 3 years old, with both hind legs, and with web halter on collar, and well broken; also 1 dark bay horse, 6 years old, black mane and tail, with white halter on. Any one giving information as to the recovery of one or both will be suitably rewarded.

For Sale:—The Brookside Farm

OF 480 ACRES.

THIS FARM IS CLOSE TO CLINTON School, three miles north of Chatter and eight North East of Brandon. This is one of the best grain and stock farms in the Province. There are on this farm 250 acres broken, 200 in crop and the balance in fallow. There are a new frame house and granary, good warm stables for thirty head of stock, all the necessary farm implements, and 150 acres of good pasture, well shaded with trees, and a running stream of good water through the centre, all well fenced. With the farm are 15 head of good horses and colts, with 12 head of cattle, and all free of encumbrance. The lot will be sold together or the stock separate to suit purchasers. This is a chance in a life time for a man of liberal means to make money. The proprietor has made a decided success of it, and is only selling because of his changing his business. At the same time he offers for sale or rent the Lambton House property on 8th St. near Rosser. The house is commodious and warm and well laid out for a first-class boarding house being centrally situated. Apply to the proprietor.

Oxford Ties

Cambridge occasionally in the great annual boat race, and when this happens, the event is a draw. There's nothing doubtful about our Oxford Ties however, they win the race outright, and have no rival in the favor of the ladies of Brandon. We are showing the superb line of fashionable footwear in the regulation pointed toes, as well as in square toes, in every variety of ties. There are no ties like the Oxford, and among Oxfords, our stock leads easily. This week we are offering special prices.

Auction Real Estate Sale

AT

W. H. Hooper's Auction Rooms

ON

JUNE 28th, 29th, and 30th

Commencing at 7 o'clock each evening

The list contains a large amount of valuable inside property, and as the Sale is practically without reserve bargains will be given.

Several large blocks of property on the list are owned by non-resident capitalists and monied corporations whose instructions are To Sell.

Section 23 is inside property and Section 22 is West End and therefore good.

The Johnson Estate needs no puffing being the best residence property in or about Brandon.

The Brock Estate from its cheapness is always in the swim, while Sections 24, 13 and 15 are favorably known.
